There was not a speaker scheduled for today's meeting

Since we did not have a speaker for today's meeting, President Steven just encouraged each table to have a general discussion about whatever was of interest— with one question being mandatory—"How do you feel about the proposed new stadium?" After 15 or 20 minutes of quiet time, Mr. Douglas queried the room to find out how many members were in favor of the proposed new stadium. Announcing the results, he could hold his hand high with the index and middle finger forming a 'V'. He was not intending to signal a victory for the stadium. He was noting that only 2 members indicated they were in favor. Other than that, there was no formal announcement, nor any earth-shattering information proclaimed from the conferences at any table. However, since no one stormed out during the meeting, and there were not any items seen flying around the room, it can be presumed that all discussions were civil and probably at least a little entertaining. A useful thought: The next time we have an open discussion meeting (or really, during the pre-meeting time on any regular Tuesday) you should try to sit at the table with our elder statesmen. They sure have a lot of interesting information about many topics—EAGA related and otherwise. It is an enjoyable and educational experience. And, on a final note...answering the questions about the vegetable replacement in the food line today. Those dark colored, sort of square or rectangle shaped items were chicken fried steak. They didn't seem to taste too much like chicken, or steak, but otherwise lived up to their name. And they were somewhat OK when smothered with the very good mushroom gravy. Probably a mixed vegetables option will be back in the food selections next week.
